Augmented Reality is clever software that processes video from a webcam in real time and superimposes 3D objects and animations in ways that make it seem as if those objects are really there. Since the beginning of 2009, we've been adding web-based Augmented Reality projects to our list of services we can offer to clients looking for an innovative way to reach their audience - because we think this is really cool stuff and a logical extension of our long-standing tradition of the creative use of leading-edge technology. More recently though, we have taken AR a step further and branched into mobile AR. As a member of the Layar Partnership Network, we are creating some fun apps for iPhone and Android phone users that help bring the world of AR that much closer. To check out our AR projects, go to www.talkingdogstudios.com/ar
